Topic: Integrating Water-Based Fire Protection Systems into MEP Design: A Collaborative Approach

This presentation highlights the importance of coordination and collaboration among MEP disciplines to successfully integrate water-based fire protection systems into building design. From water supply and drainage requirements to electrical power needs for fire pumps, we'll explore the key considerations for ensuring the reliability, operation, and end-user satisfaction of these critical systems. By working together, we can deliver effective and efficient fire protection solutions that meet the needs of building owners and occupants.

Presented by: Andres Jimenez, PE, CPD, CFPS - P2S

Andres Jimenez is a Licensed Fire Protection and Mechanical Engineer with 15 years of experience. He began his career in the design department of a fire protection contracting firm, later joining P2S, MEP/FP consulting firm in 2019. He is an experienced Fire Protection and Plumbing engineer now in the role of Fire Protection Segment Leader for P2S, supporting multiple markets and clients across the country, such as federal, health care, education and manufacturing markets. Andres has experience in water-based fire protection systems, fire alarm and mass notification, FLS code consulting, and project management. His background has given him a deep understanding of the multidisciplinary aspects of full FP/MEP integration.
